Every NIOSH-approved respirator should have a number of appropriate markings and labels that can be easily identified on the respirator itself or the product's packaging

Why NIOSH-Approved Masks Are Important

The term “NIOSH approval” comes from the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH). The NIOSH is a federal agency responsible for the researching and making the necessary recommendations to ensure the prevention of workplace injuries and ailments. Started in 1973, it's a division within the Center for Disease Control (CDC).
